DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims numbered 1-13 and 15 have been originally presented. Applicant has not presented an original claim numbered 14. Accordingly, Applicant's numbered claim 15 has been renumbered as 14. Claims 1-14 have been examined.

Specification

2. The abstract of the disclosure is objected to because the first two lines contain a sentence fragment. Correction is required. See MPEP § 608.01(b).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

4. Claims 1-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by “Turbo Assembler® Version 3.0 User's Guide,” 1991 (hereinafter TASM3).

Art Unit: 2122

As per claim 1, TASM3 discloses determining storage requirements from high-level language definitions of one or more data structures in an assembly language source program and removing the definitions from the assembly source program; determining memory addresses of the one or more data structures from memory allocation directives in the assembly language source program and removing the allocation directives from the assembly source program; and replacing references to elements of the data structures in the assembly source program with memory addresses (see, for example, page 252, last paragraph, through page 257, paragraph 3; and “Declaring public symbols”, “Defining external symbols”, “Defining global symbols”, and “Defining communal variables” on pages 224-227; Note that PUBLIC, EXTRN, GLOBAL, and COMM are assembler/linker directives that get replaced by the assembler/linker when processed).

As per claim 2, TASM3 further discloses assembling the assembly source program into a first object code segment (see, for example, the last paragraph on page 242 through the end of page 243); compiling the high-level language program into a second object code segment (see, for example, the last paragraph on page 242 through the end of page 243); and linking the first and second object code segments (see, for example, the last paragraph on page 242 through the end of page 243).

As per claim 3, TASM3 further discloses each allocation directive including a reference to a data structure definition, a variable name, and an address (for example, an EXTRN directive can be used to reference an external C++ variable, which inherently has a data structure definition, a variable name, and an address, assuming the C++ variable has been properly defined as “public” and is therefore accessible; see, for example, page 252, last paragraph, through page 257, paragraph 3).

As per claim 4, TASM3 further discloses variable name including an array size (see, for example, “Defining communal variables” on pages 226-227).

As per claim 5, TASM3 further discloses a reference to an element of a data structure in the assembly source program including a hierarchical specification of the element (see, for example, see, for example, Table 5.12 on pages 91-92).

As per claim 6, TASM3 further discloses a reference to an element of a data structure in the assembly source program including one of a request for an address and a request for an offset address of the element (see, for example, Table 5.12 on pages 91-92).

As per claim 7, TASM3 further discloses a reference to an element of a data structure in the assembly source program including one of a request for an address of the element, a request for an offset address of the element, and a request for a size of the element (see, for example, Table 5.12 on pages 91-92).

Art Unit: 2122

As per claim 8, TASM3 further discloses replacing a reference to an element of a data structure that includes a request for a size of an element with the size of the element (see, for example, Table 5.12 on pages 91-92).

As per claim 9, see the disclosure applied above to claim 2.

As per claim 10, see the disclosure applied above to claim 3.

As per claim 11, see the disclosure applied above to claim 4.

As per claim 12, see the disclosure applied above to claim 2.

As per claim 13, see the disclosure applied above to claim 3.

As per claim 14, see the disclosure applied above to claim 1.
